pon Mrs. Charles Schultels and her neighbor, Jacob Block, the beer botand make a formal complaint against Policeman John H. Hurley, who is al-Policeman John H. Hurley, who is alleged to have committed a brutal assault upon Annie Schultels on Sunday night.

They have both positively refused to make any charges against Hurley, giving as their reason that they feel pity for the policeman's wife and three small children, and that for their sake they will not prosecute him.

Pistol-Drawing Movement.

I didn't see his pistol, but he made a move with his hand towards his hip preaches on moving crow the Mayor.

"And yet you refuse to make a compilatin against him?"

"Yes: because I promised his wife with the policeman's wife and three small children, and that for their sake they will not prosecute him.

Even then, Inspector Williams says, if they refuse to appear there is no way of compelling them to press the charges against Hurley without invoking the aid of the courts. If the officer is guilty of the misconduct alleged, his superiors believe that he should receive the severest punishment, and in any case, the story originally told by Mrs. Schulteis, her daughter and Mr. Block at the police station on Sunday night, calls for a careful and thorough examination.

Mrs. Schultels, who was seen at her little grocery store, at 334 East Fifty-third street, this morning said that her daughter had almost recovered from the shock of her terrible experience on Sunday night, but was not yet able to leave the house. The doctor had ordered that shock of her terrible experience on sun-day night, but was not yet able to leave the house. The doctor had ordered that she should be kept very quiet, and must be allowed to see no one, as any excite-ment might bring on her epileptic at-tacks again.

"Two officers came from Capt. Reilly to see me last evening,; she said to the reporter, "and tried to persuade me to make charges against the police-man who assaulted my daughter, but I man who assaulted my daughter, but I refused.

"I have given my word to that man's poor wife and children, that I will do nothing more to injure him, and I mean to keep it. Neither she nor her husband has been to see me again, but my promise is good.

"I have no pity for him, for he is a brute, and if he were a single man I should not hesitate to prosecute him. But when I think of the wife and children, and how they would suffer if he were sent to prison, I cannot do it.

Will S.gn No Complaint.

Will Sign No Complaint.

"If Hurley should come here again, I would order him out of my store, but nothing can make me sign a complaint against aim. The Captain and Inspector can do what they like, but I sha! not aid it sending him to prison, although he richly deserves it. Some of my friends tell me I am wrong, but I believe I am in the right.

Mrs. Schulteis's view of the case is shared by Jacob Block, her neighbor, who has also been visited both by Hurley and his wife and children.

"The man is a scoundrel," said Mr. Block very emphatically, this morning, "and ought to be railroaded, and but for his wifn and children I would take a great deal of pleasure in helping to give him what he deserves. They came and begged and cried and went down on their knees to me aeking me to save the man, and after 'alking It over with Mrs. Schulttes, I decided not to push the matter. But it makes my blood boil to think of it. If I could have got at that man on Sunday night I was mad enough to have killed him.

Mr. Block stated that if Hurley sand he was only joking in a friendly way with Annie Schultels in the hallway he lied.

Capt. Reilly had another conference with Inspector Williams this morning, and reported the failure of his last attempt to secure the witnesses against Hurley, and it was decided, as they refused to appear voluntarily, to try the efficacy of subposenas, which will probably be requested from the Commissioners to-day.

Even then, Inspector Williams says, if they refuse to appear there is no way of compelling them to press the charges against Hurley without invoking the aid of the courts. He seemed to be completely dazed by the shock, and could give no explanation as to what caused it. The sound of the explosion was heard for two blocks, and created sounething of a panic in adjacent houses. Neighbors feared it was an earthquake, as their houses trembled under the concustion. bors feared it was an earthquake, as their houses trembled under the concustion.

When the firemen arrived they made an investigation, which showed that only the gas escaping from the meter was burning. This they extinguished by turning off the gas in the street. The fire had made no headway and did not extend above the cellar.

The living portion of the house, however, was wrecked by the flying register heads, and numerous pictures and much valuable brie-a-brac were destroyed.

It was some time after the explosion before Mr. Homans and his family returned to the house, and when they did do so, it was to find the place flooded with water and all the furniture more or less damaged.

The Fire Department and the police are unable to determine what caused the explosion. It is thought by some it was because the water was cut off from the boiler.
